Agrinatura EEIG welcomes a new member, University of Liège

28th April 2021

13th April 2021 – the Agrinatura EEIG today unanimously approved the University of Liège as a new member. University of Liège expressed its dedication to the spirit of joint collaboration within the Agrinatura EEIG to attain the overall goals of Agrinatura.

The University of Liège has a rich and abundant history dating back over 200 years in creating and transferring knowledge, encouraging international openness and regional engagement. With eleven faculties covering a range of science disciplines, the University and the Faculty of Gembloux Agro-Bio Tech in particular bring vast experience and skills into the EEIG.

The EEIG is composed of organisations which are members of the Agrinatura Association and which have an interest in engaging in agricultural research and top education for research and development, consultancy activities and developing and strengthening strategic alliances and partnerships.

The University of Liège joins Agrinatura EEIG with its members: Agrinatura Association; Agropolis Foundation; Centre de coopération internationale en recherche agronomique pour le développement (CIRAD); International Centre for Research-Oriented Agricultura (ICRA); Instituto Superior de Agronomia (ISA); Sveriges lantbruksuniversitet (Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences – SLU); Universiteit Gent (Ghent University - UGhent) and Wageningen University and Research (WUR). The Natural Resources Institute of the University of Greenwich is a privileged partner of the EEIG.

The Agrinatura EEIG welcomes the University of Liège.
